Abstract
The Religion of Meaning in the Pre Islamic Poetry
Khalid Ali Salem Al-Odwan
Mu'tah University, 2007

The poet in company with the worshiper and the sorcerer is able to face life's vents and maintain his self-confidence due to his ability to dominate the universe through an imaginary system particular to himself.

The poet forms an image of his self-reality but, reflects his personal vision of this reality and through imagery ,creates a picture reflecting his own particular vision

Image embodiment in pre-Islamic pagan (Jahili) poetry was formed from either the figurative or metaphoric.

When using Religion ,the Pre Islamic Arab poet places himself in a position of opposition to the world; he builds a world capable of detection and puts in place the alternative through the utilization of the energy hidden in the depths of Religion.

The Pre Islamic Arab poet might adopt the role of the Religion hero, propounding wisdom and living in a state of divided consciousness swaying between the Religion and human self ,subsequently arriving, through Religion, at a consciousness which defines the critics job to be the search for every word which possibly masks a hidden meaning beyond the obvious which is apparent to the receptive reader.

Pre Islamic Arab critique points to the modern Arab poets dependence or the essence of intellectual Religion representing the poets dependence his life and the society around him as the historic setting and his chosen Religion more in parallel.

This research entitled : “The Religion Of Meaning in the Pre Islamic Poetry” is divided into five chapters.
