Does any Adjective of the Unrestricted Object Replaces It?
The Discovery of Two Different Structures of the Unrestricted Object-
Type Unrestricted Object Clarifying the Descriptive Object in Arabic

Dr. Omar Okash

Abstract

We seek in this study to examine one of the problematic issues that was not fully studied. This issue is related to one of the structural behaviors that was difficult to understand and is odd, and that is to eliminate or to mention the unrestricted object in Arabic. Arabic permits sometimes to eliminate the descriptive unrestricted object and to replace it with its described adjective while in other times, we find in Arabic that this is prohibited. From this we will examine such issue attempting to provide a rule governing the behavior of the unrestricted object adjective to better understand when this adjective can\ can't replace the descriptive unrestricted object. To be more specific, the main purpose of the current study is to answer the following question, why can we say: (                    ), by omitting the unrestricted object from: (                    ), but we can not do the same thing in: (                    ), so we can not omit the unrestricted object and say: (                    *)?!

Keywords: Unrestricted Object, Replacement of Unrestricted Object, Adjective replacement, grammar renewal, Absent Grammar).
